

104
Fashion

NEWS

A FINE VINTAGE

In less than a year, No. 6 has become New York's most beloved source for vintage dresses; now, they're sharing the wealth. Co-owners Karin Bereson and Morgan Yakus have introduced a line of reworked vintage dresses in five silhouettes—in fabrics such as rich silks, European jerseys, and luxurious wools—that will be sold not only at their downtown Manhattan store but also by the hundreds at Barneys locations nationwide. Bereson, a veteran stylist, promises that each piece will be rendered “with updated, modern proportions so it doesn't feel costume-y.” Whether you prefer the Sack dress in Biba-inspired prints or the New Look with its fitted bodice and exaggerated short skirt, the dresses are destined to be favorites not just this fall, but for years and years.

KATE MULLING

watch it: